How to use this worksheet

A growth audit answers one question: where is the biggest gap between what your pipeline needs and what your marketing produces today? Work through the six parts in order. Write in numbers wherever you can, and leave a cell blank rather than guess.

01 Goals and constraints. What the business needs from marketing in the next 12 months.

02 Funnel numbers. Where leads and deals come from today, by channel.

03 Channel scorecard. Six channels rated against the same questions: search, AI search, paid, lead generation, email, automation.

04 Website and conversion. Whether visitors who are ready to talk can do so easily.

05 Tracking and data. Whether you can trust the numbers in parts 2 and 3.

06 Prioritize. Score your ideas and commit to three for the next 90 days.

TWO RULES THAT MAKE THE AUDIT USEFUL

Use pipeline, not traffic, as the scoreboard. A channel that sends fewer visitors but more qualified opportunities wins.

Bring sales. Your sales team knows which leads closed and why. Marketing data alone hides that.

Part 1: Goals and constraints

Revenue or pipeline target for the next 12 months

Average deal size and typical sales cycle (days)

Ideal customer: industry, company size, buyer role, market

Monthly marketing budget (people + tools + media)

Who works on marketing, and how many hours a week

What has been tried in the last 12 months, and what happened

PART 2

Funnel numbers

Fill in the last 12 months by source. If your CRM cannot split by source, that is your first finding: note it in Part 5.

LAST 12 MONTHS, BY FIRST-TOUCH SOURCE

Source	Visits	Leads	Qualified leads	Opportunities	Won deals	Revenue won
Organic search
AI assistants (referral or self-reported)
Paid search
Paid social
Email
Referral / partners
Outbound / sales-sourced
Direct / unknown
Total

Conversion rates

Divide each stage by the one before it. The stage with the steepest drop compared with your own history, or with what your sales team expects, is usually where to look first.

Stage	This year	Last year	Notes
Visit → lead
Lead → qualified lead
Qualified lead → opportunity
Opportunity → won
Cost per qualified lead (all spend ÷ qualified leads)

REALITY CHECK

Work backward from your target: target revenue ÷ average deal size = deals needed. Deals needed ÷ your opportunity win rate = opportunities needed. Keep going up the funnel. Compare the leads you need with the leads you get. That gap is the size of the problem this audit has to solve.

PART 3

Channel scorecard

Rate each channel from 1 (absent or broken) to 5 (strong and measured) on the questions below. Circle a number. Be strict: a 3 means it works and you can prove it.

Channel	Questions to answer	Rating
Search (SEO)	Do you rank on page one for the terms buyers use when they are ready to buy (service, "alternative to", comparison)? Do those pages convert? Is the site technically healthy in Search Console?	1 2 3 4 5
AI search	When you ask ChatGPT, Perplexity, Copilot or Google AI Mode your buyers' top questions, are you cited? Do they describe your company correctly? Can their crawlers reach you?	1 2 3 4 5
Paid ads	Is spend tied to qualified leads or opportunities, not just clicks? Are conversions imported from the CRM? Do you test new creative on a schedule?	1 2 3 4 5
Lead generation	Do you have an offer for buyers not ready to talk (a tool, a guide, an audit)? Do landing pages have one goal each? Are forms short?	1 2 3 4 5
Email	Does every new lead get a relevant follow-up sequence? Is your domain authenticated (SPF, DKIM, DMARC)? Is the list growing and engaged?	1 2 3 4 5
Automation	Are leads routed to the right person within minutes? Is lead data enriched and deduplicated? Do reports build themselves?	1 2 3 4 5

Notes per channel

Channel	What works	What is broken or missing
Search
AI search
Paid ads
Lead generation
Email
Automation

Lowest-rated channels are not automatically the priority. A channel rated 2 that your buyers barely use matters less than a 3 on the channel that produces most of your won deals.

PART 4

Website and conversion

Open your homepage and your three highest-traffic service pages on a phone. Work through the checks as a buyer would.

- ☐ The homepage headline says what you do and for whom in plain words, above the fold on mobile.
- ☐ There is one primary call to action per page, and it is the same action sales wants (book a call, request an audit, start a trial).
- ☐ Each service has its own page with the problem, the approach, proof, process, FAQ and a call to action.
- ☐ Proof is specific: named clients, numbers with timeframes, verbatim quotes with permission.
- ☐ Contact and booking forms ask only what sales needs to qualify the lead.
- ☐ After submitting, people see a clear next step (a booking link, what happens next, when).
- ☐ Pricing or "ways to work with us" is visible, even as a range or a starting point.
- ☐ Pages load quickly on mobile: Core Web Vitals pass in Search Console.
- ☐ There is an offer for people not ready to talk: a guide, a tool, a newsletter.
- ☐ You know your top exit pages and have looked at why people leave them.

Page URL	Visits / month	Conversion rate	Biggest problem you see

PART 5

Tracking and data

If you cannot trust the numbers in Part 2, fixing tracking comes before any channel work. These checks take about 30 minutes.

- ☐ GA4 records key events for every form submission and booking, and you have tested each one this quarter.
- ☐ Search Console is verified for every domain and subdomain you use.
- ☐ Every form passes source data to the CRM: UTM parameters, landing page and referrer, first and last touch.
- ☐ The CRM has a required "lead source" field with a fixed list of values, plus "How did you hear about us?" in the person's own words.
- ☐ Lead stages are defined in writing (what makes a lead qualified, what makes an opportunity) and sales and marketing agree.
- ☐ Ad platforms receive conversion data for qualified leads or opportunities, not only form fills.
- ☐ Consent is handled: a cookie banner where the law requires one, and Google Consent Mode set up if you advertise in the EEA or UK.
- ☐ All campaign links use one UTM naming convention, written down where the team can find it.
- ☐ One dashboard shows leads, qualified leads and opportunities by source each month, without manual spreadsheet work.

PART 6

Prioritize: your 90-day plan

List every fix and idea from Parts 1 to 5. Score each from 1 to 10 on Impact (effect on qualified pipeline), Confidence (how sure you are it will work) and Ease (how quickly your team can ship it). Multiply for the ICE score, then pick the top three.

#	Fix or idea	Impact	Confidence	Ease	ICE (I×C×E)
1
2
3
4
5
6
7
8

Commit to three

Priority	Measure of success at day 90	Owner	Check-in dates
2.
3.

Fix tracking first if Part 5 scored below 6. Otherwise, start where the funnel drop in Part 2 is steepest.
